Making Connections – Why is This Important?

Many adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) get services and supports through a regional center. In California there are over 140,000 adults who receive at least one service other than case management.

This report summarizes findings from the In-Person Survey (IPS), which is an interview with individuals receiving services. It is important to know if people are getting their needs met. This information can be shared with state officials (like governors or regional centers) and policy makers. If they know when needs are not being met, they can try to find resources to help. This report gives people a way of letting state officials and policy makers know what is working for them and what is not.

Survey Respondents

In this report when we say “survey respondents” we mean the person who is getting services from the regional center and who is 18 years old or older.

Person-Centered Planning is about what you and your family need and want.

When it's time for your IPP meeting, you and your service coordinator will talk and plan with anyone else you want in the meeting. Together, you'll discuss your goals, desires, and what kinds of support you want to live your life. This information will be used to create or update your IPP.

What is NCI?

Each year, National Core Indicators (NCI) asks people with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) and their families how they feel about their lives and the services they get. NCI uses surveys so that the same questions can be asked to people in all NCI states.

Who answered questions for this survey?

Questions for this survey are answered by a person who is getting services from the regional center. Sometimes a parent or someone who knows them well helps answer the questions. Information about the person who is getting services, like how old they are or what language they speak, comes from official records.

How is the data shown in this report?

We use words and images to show the number of yes and no answers we got. Some of our survey questions have more than a “yes” or “no” answer. They ask people to choose: “always,” “usually,” “sometimes,” or “seldom/never.” For this report, we count all “always” and “usually” answers as a “yes.” All others we count as “no.”
